

Abstract

Associative retrieval techniques of this invention allow a holographic recording device to simultaneously query a plurality of storage locations for the presence of a given data pattern. The techniques use a known pattern common to one or more storage locations to simultaneously verify the success of one or more write operations.

59